"I enjoyed this very much. The story is light, funny and gentle. All things that a good romance should be. I love your work." The one thing Katie Gardener didn't expect to encounter during her early morning dog walk, was a stomach-clenching, mind-numbing, arousal-inducing crush on a delectable stranger. Cursing herself for her ineptitude, she left their meeting without even knowing the man's name. Fortunately, fate conspired to bring them together once more, only to discover that their mutual animal attraction was relentlessly potent. But, having been hurt in love before, would it really be sensible of Katie to trust again? 'Yes, it's funny, isn't it?' he murmured to himself. 'What is?' 'Well, how one person's touch can make you light up inside, whilst the same attempt from another can send you running for the hills.' Katie sat for a moment and considered his statement, her heartrate ramping up with memories of the goosebumps his touch had inspired when he'd held her hand at the coffee shop, or the way her body had reacted as they'd danced. Suddenly, he shifted slightly and, although she dared not look, Katie sensed him moving incredibly close. 'Which is mine?' he whispered, stroking the back of one finger down her cheek. Katie's low groan immediately provided the answer, but she said nothing. 'Katie,' he urged. Her eyes fluttered closed as he cupped her jaw gently in one hand, encouraging her to face him. 'Katie, what effect does my touch have on you?' 'You know,' she panted as a prickle of sensation, finely balanced between fear and pleasure, darted straight up her spine into the base of her skull. 'You fucking well know.' Suddenly everything seemed to slow right down; every breath, every movement, every noise, even time itself. All that existed in that moment, all that filled her mind, all that mattered, was him. She'd never felt this way before in her life. 'Don't play with me,' she groaned. 'I would dearly love to play with you,' Jamie replied immediately, the smile evident in his tone. The New York Times best-selling book exploring the counterproductive reactions white people have when their assumptions about race are challenged, and how these reactions maintain racial inequality. In this "vital, necessary, and beautiful book" (Michael Eric Dyson), antiracist educator Robin DiAngelo deftly illuminates the phenomenon of white fragility and "allows us to understand racism as a practice not restricted to 'bad people' (Claudia Rankine). Referring to the defensive moves that white people make when challenged racially, white fragility is characterized by emotions such as anger, fear, and guilt, and by behaviors including argumentation and silence. These behaviors, in turn, function to reinstate white racial equilibrium and prevent any meaningful cross-racial dialogue. In this in-depth exploration, DiAngelo examines how white fragility develops, how it protects racial inequality, and what we can do to engage more constructively.
